THE NEVADA DESERTS.

overnment Experts Discover That They Can Be Reclaimed in Large Part by Irrigation.

The irrigation possibilities of the rid west, especially that part of it included in the great interior basin, once called the great American desert, are daily becoming more apparent. Surveys for reservoir sites reveal the fact that there are many locations where water can be cheaply stored and used for power and irrigation. Other surveys show large tracts of good.

Haste and you will finish by the fading light of day."

"You do? Well I think he is a scoundrel. Think of the way he treated and will shape the store of good." Surveys for reservoir sites reveal the surveys show large tracts of good farming land favorably located for watering from these storage reser-

A more detailed study is being made of the amount of water each watershed will furnish, especially those on which there are good reservoir sites, and the losses of water from each. Unresident hydrographer of the geological survey at Reno, Nev., 13 new stream gaging stations have been established in Nevada and eastern California. Three of these are on Walker river and branches, one on Carson river, six on Truckee river and tributaries and four on the Humboldt and its tributaries. The run-off data from these on these streams, when they cover a period sufficiently long to include the two extremes of run-off, will be of great value in determining the irrigation possibilities and designing the works on each. A dozen rain gages are to be located at characteristic places in this section. These, with the 11 already in use there, will, with the aid of the run-off data, render ascertainable the ratio of precipitation to runoff, and thus enable engineers to compute, from rainfall records, the runoff from adjacent auxiliary watersheds. Evaporation from the surface and fluctuations of the surface level of some of the larger lakes are being measured, and losses incident to storage of large bodies of water and losses from small bodies of running water are to be studied. During the last season Mr. Taylor has been assisted by Prof. E. C. Murphy, of Cornell university.

KAISER IN RELIGIOUS DEBATE.

German Emperor Criticises Prof. Delitzsch's Lecture on "Babylon and the Bible."

Emperor William has entered the controversy aroused by Prof. Delitzsch's lecture on "Babylon and the Bible." In a letter to Admiral Hollman, councilor of the German Oriental society, the kaiser says he regrets that Prof. Delitzsch made a grave mistake in approaching the question of Revelation in a polemical spirit, more or less denying the Revelation, and even professing to be able to trace it back to a historical and purely a human source. The emperor sets forth the following conclusions: "I believe in the one and only God. We may need a form in order to teach this will be possibly and substantially modified under the influence of research through inscriptions and exca- ple-minded-quite girlish, you know.' vations. That does not matter. Neither does it matter that much of the nimbus of the chosen people will thereby disappear. The kernel of the contents of the Old Testament will remain always the same-God and His works. Religion has never been the result of science, but the pouring out of the heart and being of man from intercourse with God."

BEFORE Lieut. Quigley had been at Durant for a week the guests of the springs had settled it in their minds that he was hopelessly in love with Anna Spraggins. He showed his feelings in every movement of his handsome frame; in every look of his clear eyes; in every step of his military feet. The idle resort had suffered from ennui for months. There had been no lovemaking scenes, no maidens who were looking for Lotharios; no boys spying the fields for girls with golden hair. The season had been tamely dull. Therefore, when Quigley went to the Edwards house and registered under the name of Hines and the next day meeting Miss Spraggins, the real romance of the season commenced. And the occupants of the cottages and guests of the hotel were not long in discovering the fact.

> Quigley and Miss Spraggins were then walking across the lawn. Quigley showed his features well. He was the ideal soldier. To see him walk was to imagine a soldier, in full possession of his courage, fearing nothing, walkingunheedingly amongst flying bullets.

His mission to Durant was of a secret nature. Therefore he had registered under the assumed name of Hines. "No one knows me here," he said to himself. "It makes little difference If the grantor is ill the son must what name I take. I care nothing for army cuts something of a figure in society, but I want none of it here. When I get through with my business,

> It was the following morning after his arrival that he met Miss Spraggins, a chit of a girl with a face as beautiful as a dream. She was dressed in muslin, and around her neck was a scarf as bright as the rays of the sun. Quigley was lost at once. He attempted to put her out of his mind, but the more stay at Durant until he had told Miss Spraggins of his love. "Quigley?" he repeated. "Well-yes -slightly."

"And what sort of a man is he?" Quigley grew red; tried to turn the conversation; he laughed a sickly laugh and lit a cigar. "I would rather not express an opinion," he replied, faintly. "I have met him often, and I gaged. And just as all thought the wedding was to take place before the holidays off he goes to Venezuela. When he came back he dropped her completely. If I were her brother or father I would take a stick and go after him."

Mabel Young! Mabel Young! The name spoke volumes to him. He had known the girl. Had gone with her on moonlit nights to parties, picnics and the like. But he had never loved her, never offered his hand, never proposed marriage. What was she to him? In a jaunty way he had taken her sailing. When the hours were dark with night he had slipped his arms about her. "Yes," he said, "I have heard something about Miss Young and her lover." If the sun had been shining Miss Spraggins could have seen the blush on his face. 'I have heard that he is very handsome," continued Miss Spraggins. "You have seen him? Is he good looking?" That staggered him. What could be say? If he said that he was, and Miss Spraggins should find out all about the duplicity, she would think him a contemptible cad. "Who told you all these things?" he asked, quietly. "Dora Kelly. You know she always keeps up with such affairs. You know Dora, of course?" "Yes. I remember her quite well." His mind reverted to a little girl in the long ago with rather pretty hair. The fact was that when Quigley and Dora were in pinafores, the two were very much in love.

The conversation at this period was becoming quite personal, and Quigley longed to escape. Before Miss Spraggins could begin questioning him further the dinner bell rang. "Was man ever in such a predicament?" he mused, while supping his soup. "I have been a mutton-headed fool. I should have registered under my own name. I cannot tell her who I am now. The game has been played too strong and the race is too well on. Ye smoking herrings! To-morrow I will leave for Washington!" In the morning he packed his baggage. But when the porter came to "Well, they make a happy-looking take it away he revoked the order. He could not leave Durant without having a promise from Miss Spraggins. But how was he to proceed? She was distant; she was critical; she was anything but a summer girl. She combined all the seasons. At times she was as cold as a Texas wind; again she was as soft as a Dakota valley in June; then from her eyes he had seen evidences a hundred times that she was holding back-shielding herself because of her environment and religion -against the passions of the body that know no license and recognize no law.

> Two weeks had passed, when one morning she met him. "I have a party here, and we are going to bowl. Will you come along? You might as well. know, you now, and your name is not Hines. Come along, I wish to talk with > you." "It was for army purposes," he said, lightly. "I never wished to sail under an assumed name. Sooner or later I would have told you of my real identity.

At best, you may call it a joke."
"A joke! The very idea!" she laughed, merrily. "And I have further news to tell you," she continued. "Miss Young will be here to-morrow. And between her and Mrs. Fielding, how are you going to get along? Oh, you needn't blush. I've seen you and Mrs. Fielding when you least expected I was looking. And you have made love to her, too; don't deny it!"

"Please, please spare me," he exclaimed. Then he added, more earnestly: "Can't you see that I love youthat I have loved you since I first saw you. Tell me, will you not be my wife?"

"Is this a simple fancy of an idle man, or do you mean what you say?" she "I mean what I say. I came here on a hunt for a deserter in the army. I registered under an assumed name, not because I expected any gain from doing such a thing. I have known Miss Young for years, and I have visited her often. But never have I made love to her or have I even kissed her. I love you; you are essential to my well being; you must become my wife."

"Oh, stop that," she said. "I will marry you, for I love you. But mind, I do not condone your treatment of Mabel."

The Foolish Suicide.

A New York man committed suicide because he was afraid he had Bright's disease, but it was found when the doctors examined him that he didn't have it and probably never would have been afflicted with any such malady. This shows, says the Chicago Record-Herald, how unwise it is to be hasty regarding these matters.

DUCHESS LATE AT HER PARTY.

Was Dining Out and Lost Track of the Time.

At the duchess of Devonshire's party on the evening of the opening of parliament an amusing contretemps occurred. A number of women arrived at Devonshire house on time, descended from their carriages and mounted the grand staircase. After disposing of their wraps, to their surprise they found no one there to receive them. The only persons in sight were a few who had arrived early, and were trying to hide themselves, and the distracted servants. There was nothing else to do but go downstairs and wait, which they did. Shortly afterward the duchess of Devonshire drove up street. Hard by one is shown the hurriedly and quickly took her place room where the famous "'swarry.' reception began. It appears that the duchess was dining with Lady Gosford and lost track of the time. A number of women who were at the reception have complained indignantly that cabinet ministers and statesmen so blocked up the top of the stairs that it was almost impossible to get to the hostess.

Tablet Unveiled in House at Bath Where Author Used to Stop.

It Was There That the Character of Little Nell First Occurred to Dickens - Other Characters Had Their Birthplace There.

The anniversary of the birth of Charles Dickens was made interesting at Bath, England, which is rich in association with the novelist, by the unveiling of a tablet to his memory upon 35 St. James square, which is the house in which the novelist used to The house is additionally interesting to the lovers of Dickens because of the incontestable evidence in his own writings that it was here that the idea of the character of little Nell first occurred to him. When, moreover, it is known that it was at the celebration of one of his own birthdays that the pathetic little figure rose in his mind's eye the double appropriateness of the proceedings is apparent.

The tablet was unveiled by Mr. Percy Fitzgerald, president of the Dickens decoration to Walter Savage Landor, who was Dickens' greatest friend at

In the evening there was a notable sparkled with quotations from the famous novels, and the toast list was wick so dearly loved was served among in his life Mr. Pickwick fell among female cardsharpers.

Charles Dickens undoubtedly found Bath worth visiting for the material it afforded him. It is devoutly believed locally that the very name of Pickwick came from Bath. Everyone knows how Sam Weller was disgusted to find the name of Pickwick on the back of the Bath coach, and it is well established that there was a landlord minus of that name.

The story goes, too, that Moses Pickwick was adopted by a lady who found him an abandoned infant by the road- in 1902 as in the year 1850. side at Wick, a parish eight miles from Bath. She called him Moses because of the resemblance of his adventures to those of the patriarch, and Pickwick because he was picked up at Wick.

Then it is a much-prized tradition that the name of Snodgrass belonged also to Bath, for there was an Alexander Snodgrass who kept the old Caledonian inn, now defunct, in Trim at the head of the staircase and the consisting of a boiled leg of mutton and the usual trimmings," took place.

New Department of Commerce Inc. volves Vast Commercial Interests

Secretary Cortelyon Will Have the Distinction of Dealing with the Largest Aggregation of Business in the World.

The new department of commerce will have the unique distinction of dealing with the largest commercial interests of the world. In domestic exports, in manufactures, in transportstion, and in internal commerce the United States is at the head of the world's list of great nations. Some fig ures just compiled by the treasury bu reau of statistics, which by the new law becomes a part of the department of commerce, estimate the internacommerce of the country at $20,000 000,000, or equal to the entire intermational commerce of the world.

In arriving at this estimate of $20,-000,000,000 for the internal commerce of the United States, the bureau of statistics includes only one transaction in each article produced, while, in fact, a very large number of the articles Fellowship, who also unveiled a mural produced pass through the hands of several "middlemen" between those of the producer and those of the comsumer. The estimate is based upon the figures of the census, which put the gathering of Dickens devotees at the total value of manufactures in 1900 at assembly room where the mayor pre- $13,000,000,000; those of agriculture at sided at a dinner. Estimating the internal commerce of the country at former census years by the same method, the bureau of statistics finds that the total internal commerce has grown from about $2 -000,000,000 in 1850 to $3,500,000,000 im 1860, $6,250,000.000 in 1870, $7,750.000,-000 in 1880, and $12,000,000,000 in 1890. of the White Hart, the coaching ter- It will be seen from this that the imternal commerce seems to have increased 50 per cent. in the decade froma 1890 to 1900, and is ten times as large

> During the same period, from 1850 to 1902, the population has increased from 23,000,000 to 79,000,000, and is therefore only 31/2 times as great as in 1850, while the internal commerce is ten times as great as at that time. This relative gain of internal commerce over population is due, in part, to the greatly increased facilities for transportation, the cheapening of cost of articles utilized, and the increased earnings and increased wealth of the people. The railroads have increased from 9,021 miles in 1850 to 201,839 miles in 1902, and the estimated wealth of the country from $7,135,780,000 in 1850 to $94,300,000,000 in 1900-a per capital increase of from $308 in 1850 to $1,236 in 1900. This increase in wealth has been accompanied by an increase in deposits in banks, those in savings banks alone increasing from $43,431,130 in 1850 to $2.597,094,580 in 1901.

> The contrast with the Yale graduate marriages in the early part of the last century is striking. There are only three summarized records in the first third of the century, but these show, 159 marriages and 636 children, or almost four children to a marriage.

Out of returns from 18 members of the class of 1810-which had a total membership of 54-it appears that 17 had married and had 78 children. This is the first Yale class of which records are available. In the class of 1826, the largest ever graduated in an American college prior to 1837, there were 325 with the women crews at Cornell, Vas- children, living and dead, returned as offspring of 54 marriages 40 years after graduation.

Syracuse Banker Celebrates His Eighty-Second Birthday in a Unique Way.

tor and merchant, of Syracuse, N. Y. | military service. celebrated his eighty-second birthday the other day by entertaining at his home about 100 widows.

Mr. Howlett stood in the parlor and shook hands with each of the "girls," as he called them, as they entered. The guests wrote their names in his birthday book, but he did not ask them to write their ages, "because," he said, "I don't believe in encouraging lying."

Mr. Howlett had invited 99 from Syracuse and 37 from out of town. Among those from other cities who were invited were: Mrs. Louise Payne, Mrs. I. L. Merriam, Mrs. Ethel Craig, Mrs. John M. Jaycox, Mrs. Ellen Merriam and Mrs. Walter Wales, of New York; Mrs. A. R. Woodruff, of Nutley, N. J., and Mrs. Moses Dolby, of Atlantic Highlands.

True to his promise, Mr. Howlett excluded every man from the place. He represent the reception-room of the aire.' did not count, however, upon the wiles reigning emperor of the flowery kingof his grandson, Marshall Durston, who, dressed up as a widow, secured entrance to the house. He was introduced to Mr. Howlett as Mrs. Bain, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Howlett did not remember of attention to her. but was too polite to object to her presence.

Young Durston wore a black dress, Persian lamb jacket and widow's weeds. Black glasses made the deception complete. Durston remained for some time, when Mr. Howlett was told, He enjoyed the joke.

A women's orchestra furnished music, a woman took care of the furnace, and Miss Florence Cowie, daughter of Mr. Howlett's lifelong friend, ex-Mayor Cowie, opened the doors of the carriages as they drove up.

Mr. Howlett says if he lives another year he will give a party to old maids.

WORKMEN BUILD CHUCRH.

Unique Religious Institution at South Chicago Has No Pastor But It Thrives.

A church in which the members preach the sermons has grown up in South Chicago, Ill., and it has just decided to erect a house of worship to accommodate 300 persons.

The new edifice will be at One Hundred and Sixth street and Avenue O. Its founders were S. F. Bitcon, C. S. Pertello and George Fitzgerald, who are employed in the yards of the American Shipbuilding company as laborers. In joining the church they pledge themselves not only to abstain from dancing and participation in social gatherings, but to furnish a Sunday sermon when they should be called upon for one. The church has no pastor and the bible is its creed.

Don't Want Free Libraries.

Andrew Carnegie's library donations still fail in some cases to be received with gratitude. BIG PAY FOR ARCHBISHOP.

The $75,000 Salary of the Head of the English Church May Be Increased.

There is renewed talk of an effort to increase the salary of the archbishop of Canterbury, the head of the English church. To the average layman it might seem that the reverend gentleman is already well paid, as his salary as head of the see of Canterbury is $75,000 a year. He also draws a funny little stipend of $55 a year as "clerk of the closet" to the sovereign. He has a magnificent episcopal residence at Canterbury, but he spends most of his time at Lambeth palace, his official headquarters, in London by the Thames, just above the house of parliament. The succesto St. Augustine and Thomas a-Becket is the supreme authority in all matters connected with the church service. Though he does not appoint the bishops under him, he can discipline them, or even deprive them of their position if they misbehave. The new archbishop will be, enthroned February 12.

BURN TOO MUCH COAL.

Again the English Railways Find American Locomotives Far Too Expensive.

An official of the Midland railway locomotive department says in an interview in the Newcastle (Eng.) Daily

"The tremendous cost of up-keep is against the American engines, not only as fuel burners, but also with respect to maintenance. The Midland railway engineers have given them a free hand, but practical experience has revealed nothing to demonstrate the superiority of the American over the home-made article. Americans cannot build an engine suitable to the English railroads. That is now admitted by the most important of our engineering experts."

The Midland company has had several American engines, but now is manufacturing a three-cylinder compound engine of its own pattern for which an economy of 30 per cent. in fuel is claimed.

Mr. Morton slowly paced the saloon with his hands behind his back and his head bent forward, as in deep contemplation. In a short time Mr. Rockwell returned. He gave Mr. Morton a questioning look. In response Mr. Morton shook his head gloomily but said not a word. His companion showed no surprise nor did he evince much disappointment. Like Mr. Kent, he saw no hope for immediate relief, and had resigned himself to await results. He selected a book from the shelves and read quietly until dinner was announced.

Dinner was served at six o'clock. The weight of entertaining fell on Hestor and Vincent. While the latter gentleman had not yet been able to attract the attention of Mr. Carmody he was satisfied that he would have an abundance of time in which to explain his plans. Mr. Morton had acquainted his associates with the failure which thus far had attended his negotiations. He yet held out hope, but it was faint. When coffee had been served, Hestor arose

"Gentlemen, we are now not far from Cape Cod. During the evening I am going to send a man ashore with letters. You will find stationery in your staterooms. I suppose that all of you wish to send word assuring your families and friends that you are alive and well. You can do so, but you must not enter into any particulars about this outing. You can inform those in whom you are concerned that you are safe; that you will return to them after a reasonable ength of time, or you may make any other statement not connected with business or with your present whereabouts. Hand me the letters unsealed, and I will examine them and have them mailed during the night. I should have all of them in my possession before nine o'clock."

"How about me?" asked Mr. Vin-

"You are included," said Mr. Hes-

There was no hesitancy in acceptng this invitation. The thought that they could speedily communicate with their loved ones lifted a great load from their minds. For an hour Hestor acted as censor on these letters. He made but few changes, and these of course rendered it necessary to rewrite the rejected letters. In the meantime the yacht had rounded Cape Cod and dropped into the quiet waters of the bay.

Shortly after nine o'clock the dinghy was swung out on her davits and lowered into the water. A young an in a business suit, such as worn Sire Bumps 2:00%, Rubenstein 2:05 for everyday service, by the average Oakland Baron 2:09%, 97 others, dams citizen, acted as mail carrier. Propelled by the sturdy arms of a sailor, the little craft disappeared in the darkness. Two miles away the. lights of Provincetown flickered in

At about one o'clock in the morning, when most of the passengers were asleep, the dinghy made another trip ashore, and returned without the mail messenger. He was landed near Boston, and on the following bing!!" morning made a rapid journey to Springfield, Mass., and Albany, N. Y., thence to New York city and Brooklyn, reaching Philadelphia late that night. In these cities he posted the letters which, as has been told were received with so much joy. The next day he left Philadelphia for Cape May; late that night a boat came in from the ocean, and an hour later he was on board the "Shark."

From the time the sand dunes of Cape Cod faded away in the night until six days had passed, the passengers and crew of the "Shark" caught no sight of land. Many ships were sighted, but Capt. Waters so directed the course of the yacht that none came within signalling distance and generally remained hull down on the horizon.

It was cloudy most of the time, and by the temperature alone was it surely known that a southerly course was being taken. Thursday night was uncomfortably warm, and the following day when the sun came out from behind the clouds the templating fixing up a bath room or shade from the awnings was found closet or stationary wash stand, get an grateful. On Friday the signs that the tropics had been entered were unmistakable.

Seventh street, between Main and High. When Mr. Pence awoke about three o'clock Tuesday morning he was much alarmed. He was certain that something serious had happened. An unearthly silence prevailed. The engines had stopped, and save for the faint buzz of the electrical machinery there was no sound on the "Shark." The boat had lost all motion. It no longer rose and fell to the heaving of the seas. Mr. Pence hurriedly dressed and went on deck. A seaman was pacing back and forth on the afterdeck. Mr. Pence looked out over the port side of the yacht. A huge wall of rock towered almost over his head. In the 1ght of the nascent moon, the "Shark" seemed to rest in the center of a vast amphitheater of beetling rocks and crags. Here and there he could make out the eojares dous au as man seed equ form of a palm, and to his ears came the distinct sound of falling water, as of a cascade. To the east the cliffs threw a long shadow over the lake in which the yacht was an-charad. The moon had just scaled Imagine a pear-shaped lake about a mile at its greatest width and a mile and a half in length, walled in by rocks and crags whose rugged slopes were softened by the splendid foliage of the tropics. Nature, in some fantastic mood, had created this spot, and then as if appalled at her work, had wreathed it with flowers, and chastened its outlines with the harmony of fern, vine and palm. The narrow inlet leading to the ocean was guarded by two great rocks, which seemed to overhang and threaten the intrepid sailor who dared explore and ravish the beauties which nestled within. These rocks were fully 400 feet in height, and unlike those surrounding the lake, were free from tree or verwho took a long look in the direction dure. #### EARRINGS WORN FOR AGES.

Of All Ornaments Won by Human Beings, They Are Oldest Recorded in History.

Although few women in recent years have been wearing earrings, the fashion still survives, and at functions of select society pendants of brilliants are still frequently seen. Of all the ornaments used by human beings earrings are probably the oldest so far as historical research has been able to determine. They date from the remotest antiquity, the earliest mention of them being in Genesis in the time of Jacob, about 1732 B. C. This antiquity has been confirmed by the finding of costly and elaborate specimens in the Troad by Dr. Schliemann, in Etruria by Castellani and in Anglo-Saxon remains in England. Their use at first was not ornamental, but superstitious, states the Chicago Chronicle.

Amulets consisting of inscribed precious stones on pieces of metal were worn suspended from the neck or more frequently from the ears. Augustine speaks strongly against earrings worn as amulets in his time. It is a noteworthy fact that the ears of the famous statue Venus de Medici are bored, evidently for earrings.

The fashion of men wearing earrings, which is still common in Italy. among the fishermen of Cornwall, England, with Portuguese sailors and many others, is a survival of the superstition that they were a protection against evil. Many of the Italians in New York wear earrings for this pur-

CURLING AND HURLING.

Scotch Games That Have Been Played by Young and Old Since Time Out of Mind.

Curling, the game that was for a long time furtively indulged in here by a few braw laddies, has been placed on a substantial footing, with numerous well-organized teams and well-contested tournaments. Handball has been wrested from the monopoly of a few professionals, and today a hand-ball court is a popular feature of every well-equipped athletic club. Discus throwing, that the Grecian youths excelled in at the Olympian games, has recently become a regular scheduled feature of all big athletic meetings. More recently the royal and ancient game of golf has been transplanted from the hills of Scotland to the heights of the Hudson, where it languished for several years under the popular suspicion that it was merely a game cunningly devised to lure gouty old men into taking much-needed exercise. Then it began to grow in popular favor, until to-day tees and putting greens dot the country almost as thickly as baseball fields, and $15,000,000 is spent yearly for golfing implements, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

But hurling is far more ancient than any of these. The Scotchman. proud of the antiquity of golf, points to the time-stained documents carefully preserved in Edinburgh.

DEWEY'S NEW RESPONSIBILITY Picture of the Hero of Manila on a

The boy pupils of a down-town school were studying the history of the war with Spain, says the Philadelphia Times. One boy seemed to have difficulty in remembering the names of some of the American naval commanders who were conspicuous in that trouble. "Here," the teacher said, finally, going to her desk and taking out some souvenirs of the jubilee parade of 1899, "take these buttons home this afternoon, study them over night, and tell me in the morning which is Schley, which is Dewey and which Sampson." She handed him the buttons bearing the likenesses of the three commanders, and the boy took them and went home.

In the morning the teacher called him to her desk and asked him if her knew the names of the three officers. "This is Schley, and-" handing out the second—"this is Sampson."

"That's right; that's right; very good! Of course the third is-where is the third button I gave you?"

"Please, ma'am," he replied, "me mudder took Dewey and sewed him on me fadder's pants dis morning."

A short time ago, when traveling in that part of the country, I saw this fort and asked the name of it. "Why, that is Fort Blunder," said my informant. "Did you never hear of it?" I confessed ignorance, and he explained matters.

It seems that after the war of 1812 the government of the United States became convinced that the entrance to Lake Champlain should be guarded by a fort strong enough to engage any British fleet which might attempt to force an entrance to the lake, and so Fort Montgomery was constructed at a cost of nearly $500,000. It was decided that in view of the fact that the United States had not intentionally encroached on Canadian soil the forty-fifth parallel should be bent a little out of its course at this point so as to include the fort. The great Emperor Charles V. had the curious idea of celebrating his own funeral. Shortly before his death he caused a tomb to be made in the chapel of the monastery of Estremadura, to which he had retired after his abdication, and on its completion he was carried to it as though dead. Placed in a coffin and accompanied by a procession, he was borne along, while chants were sung, prayers said and tears shed. After the solemn farce was over he was left alone in the chapel, where he remained a short time before rising out of the coffin.
